CORE PRINCIPLES OF CULTURIZE

Every single day, teachers and leaders bring their best selves to work, ready to invest in their students and in their community. The Culturize Institute provides attendees with powerful tools and strategies to put the Core Principles into action. Each session of the Institute is aligned to one or more of the principles. Read about them here, and then make note of the associated icons listed with each conference session.

CHAMPION FOR STUDENTS

Never quit on a student. When a student doesn't meet your expectations, invest more time to understand their story. Show compassion and empathy. When we take time to connect to their experiences, it shows we value them and their voice.

EXPECT EXCELLENCE

What we model is what we get. Model the behaviors you want others to emulate. We should never ask others to do what we are not willing to do ourselves. Every school has average, but the best schools do not allow average to become the standard.

CARRY THE BANNER

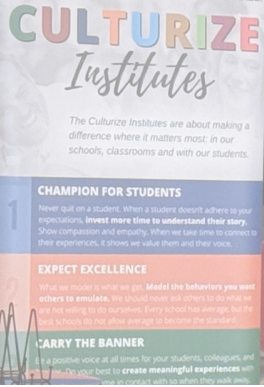

Be a positive voice at all times for your students, colleagues, and families. Do your best to create meaningful experiences with those whom you come in contact with so when they walk away, they speak positively about their interaction with you.

MERCHANT OF HOPE

Believe that everyone wants to be great. No student, parent, or staff member wants to be a failure. However, there will be times when people lose their way. Believe that you can inspire others to be more and do more than they ever thought possible.

Welcome and Opening Keynote with Jimmy Casas and Garth Larson

Culturize – Every Student. Every Day. Whatever It Takes.

Average schools don't inspire greatness—and greatness is exactly what today's students deserve. In this powerful and inspiring keynote, Jimmy Casas and Dr. Garth Larson challenge educators and leaders to eradicate average by embracing the Four Core Principles of Culturize: Be a Champion for All Kids, Expect Excellence, Carry the Banner, and Be a Merchant of Hope. Drawing from their combined experiences as school and district leaders, authors, and national presenters, Jimmy and Garth bring to life what these principles look like in action across today's schools. They share real stories of impact, reflection, and transformation—reminding every educator of their purpose and reigniting the passion that drives great teaching and leadership. Participants will leave this session inspired and equipped to build cultures of excellence—where every student is known, valued, and part of something truly great.

Time to Embrace Change - Effective Processes to Move Your System

Jimmy Casas

As educators, we must regularly ask ourselves: Why aren't we getting the results we want when implementing initiatives? Average results are no longer acceptable. In this session, participants will learn to embrace change through impactful strategies that promote clarity, collaboration, voice, and effective decision-making. Jimmy demonstrates how change can be inspiring and reignite our passion for the work when we take a systemic approach. More importantly, he reminds us that we can inspire our staff to never allow average to become the standard.

Expecting Excellence through Intentional Leadership - The 5 C's

Matt Degner

As superintendents and district leaders, the job has never been more complex. To find and maintain success, we have to commit to leading with intention while modeling the behaviors we wish to see repeated. In this session, participants will be introduced to the 5 C's Framework of Intentional Leadership. Leading with Core Values, providing Clarity, building Connections, fostering Collaboration, and transparently Communicating are fundamental to our success as district and building leaders. Attendees will gain practical strategies to bolster processes and relationships while providing confidence to the rest of the organization you lead.

Lead with Pride, Purpose, and Professionalism

Joy Kelly

Slogans don't create culture - behaviors do. This session challenges educators to "carry the banner" by modeling the behaviors they want emulated across their school community. Through stories, reflection, and dialogue, attendees will examine how everyday actions, language, and attitude shape school culture and influence others. Attendees will leave equipped with practical strategies for lifting others, strengthening relationships, and consistently embodying the culture they aspire to create.

A Culture of Investment: Building Individuals' Capacity for Excellence

Sarah Johnson

Educators can experience great challenges leading in classrooms, hallways, and in our communities through a range of social and cultural issues. Burnout and compassion fatigue are real in our profession, and we must do our best to build the capacity in ourselves and those we serve to mitigate the inevitable stress inherent in educational institutions. In this session, we will focus on strategies to build our capacity for personal excellence and reflect on ways to replicate that work with our colleagues and students every day. We must invest in ourselves so that we can build capacity to serve others with excellence, intentionality, and passion.

Learning Isn't One-and-Done: Reassessment that Reflects What We Believe

Becky Pepler

What does it say about our culture if one bad day can define a student's future? Reassessment is more than a grading strategy—it's a reflection of what we believe about students, learning, and growth. In this session, we'll explore how reassessment policies can either fuel inequity or foster hope. Using the Culturize framework, we'll examine how to create systems where second chances are the norm, not the exception. You'll walk away with practical strategies, policy examples, and tools to make reassessment a powerful part of your school's culture. Grounded in the Culturize core value of Merchant of Hope, this session is about reimagining reassessment as a tool to inspire—not discourage—student persistence and confidence.

The Opportunity Leader

Garth Larson

Leading a school today is no small task—but within every challenge lies an opportunity to lead with greater purpose, clarity, and impact. In this dynamic breakout session designed specifically for educational leaders, Dr. Garth Larson introduces the concept of the Opportunity Leader—a school leader who chooses to see every situation, setback, and success as a chance to create meaningful change. Drawing on real experiences from schools across the country, this session explores how elementary principals can reframe challenges into opportunities that support student achievement, build staff capacity, and foster a culture of optimism and resilience. Participants will engage in reflective dialogue, examine practical leadership strategies, and explore how to model an “opportunity mindset” in their own buildings. Whether you’re navigating change, managing competing demands, or simply looking to refocus your leadership lens, this session will equip you with actionable ideas and renewed energy to lead with intention and impact. Walk away reminded that the opportunity to lead forward is always right in front of you.

Cultivating Resilience: Practical Bounce Back Strategies for Passionate Educators

Sarah Johnson

In this session, educator, speaker, and resilience researcher Sarah Johnson, shares practical strategies to cultivate personal resilience, so you can be a merchant of hope that your school community needs. In this session, we explore how to navigate the challenges inherent in the profession while maintaining, and even enhancing, personal well-being. Practical strategies, such as setting healthy boundaries as well as personal wellbeing practices to reduce stress and mitigate the onset of burnout, are the focus. Participants will gain actionable tips to build up their own personal resilience to build a stronger sense of satisfaction in the school setting. Whether new or seasoned in the field of education, it’s time to invest in your well-being and unlock your resilience potential, and continue to cultivate hope.

The Heart of Teaching

Kheila Casas

This session will focus on the power of connection in the classroom. We will dive into how strong relationships, thoughtful planning, and creative thinking can transform the way students engage and learn. Attendees will explore practical ways to build a learning environment where curiosity thrives and every student feels like they belong. Walk away with strategies you can use right away to meet the needs of all learners and create a classroom environment where relationships drive engagement.

The Courage to Forgive, Repair, and Lead Forward

Joy Kelly

Excellence in leadership isn't about perfection — it's about the courage to forgive, repair, and move forward with purpose. This session reframes forgiveness as a vital leadership skill that fosters trust and strengthens relationships. When leaders—defined as anyone who plays a pivotal role in shaping the culture and overall success of students and the school—extend grace without lowering expectations, they create cultures of accountability, compassion, and continuous improvement where everyone feels safe to learn, risk, and innovate.

Communicating to Support and Empower Students and Staff

Jim Wichman

Excellence doesn't happen by chance—it's cultivated through high expectations, authentic support, and empathetic communication. In this fast-paced, high-energy session, participants will uncover how communication is often the hidden barrier between intent and impact. Using the DiSC framework as a guide, Jim Wichman helps leaders learn to “speak the language” of those they serve—students, staff, and colleagues alike. Come ready to laugh, learn, and practice specific strategies that make communication more efficient, relationships stronger, and leadership more human. Participants will leave with meaningful, manageable, and tangible tools to elevate their culture and Expect Excellence every day.

The Enemies of Efficacy - What's Sabotaging Your Team's Belief?

Jenni Donohoo

Even the most well-intentioned collaborative teams can be undermined by hidden forces that erode their collective belief in what they can accomplish together. Blame. Isolation. Comparison. Ambiguity. These "enemies of efficacy" silently sabotage teams' shared confidence and derail improvement efforts. In this powerful session, you'll learn to recognize the twelve enemies that prevent collective efficacy from taking root in schools and discover practical strategies to overcome them. Through real-world scenarios and honest reflection, you'll identify which enemies are at work in your own context and walk away with actionable micro-moves to protect and strengthen your team's belief in their collective capacity. When we name the enemies, we can defeat them—and build the hope and excellence our students deserve.

Fueling the Right Fires: Building a Culture of Learning Through Grading Practices

Becky Peppler

This session explores how grading practices shape school culture and how small missteps can unintentionally undermine the values we say we believe. Through real grading scenarios, we'll reflect on how to align our systems with our commitments to students by Championing for Students, ensuring our practices support, not penalize, learning; Expecting Excellence, defining and reporting learning with clarity and purpose; and Carrying the Banner, modeling consistent, transparent grading practices that strengthen trust across classrooms. Using the Culturize framework, we'll examine formative practice, separating behavior from achievement, and aligning grades to learning, not compliance. You'll walk away with tools, examples, and strategies to build a stronger culture of learning in your school.

Leading for Lasting Impact

Stephen Speck

The most influential educators and leaders do more than inspire in the moment. They create ripples that last well beyond their time in the classroom or school. In this session, we'll explore how to lead in ways that shape culture, strengthen relationships, and influence others with purpose. Walk away with strategies to ensure your impact is not felt just today, but continues to grow in the hearts, minds, bodies, and souls of those you lead.

Fostering School Leader Efficacy

Don Smith

Collective teacher efficacy remains at the top of the list of influences that impact student achievement. Recent research has shown that a Principal's sense of leadership efficacy influences collective teacher efficacy, as well as student achievement. This workshop is designed to delve into the research, identify ways to foster Principal efficacy, and leverage it to maximize collective teacher efficacy and student achievement.

Walking With Purpose: Leaving Work With Energy, Not Empty

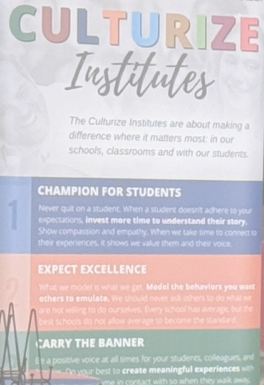

Jim Wichman

Educators often hear phrases like "Remember your why" or "Lead with purpose"—but what happens when those words no longer fuel the tank? In this powerful and reflective session, Jim Wichman helps participants rediscover what it truly means to walk with purpose. Through community, conversation, and guided reflection, attendees will explore strategies to leave work energized rather than depleted, ensuring the best of who they are shows up at home, in their schools, and for their students. You'll leave with a clearer vision, renewed focus, and actionable tools to sustain your purpose every day.

Lead From Where You Are

I'm just...It's a phrase we hear all the time. I'm just a teacher, I'm just a paraprofessional, I'm just a custodian....the list is long and is often followed by reasons something CAN'T happen. Leadership is an action and it starts with you. Leading with INTENTION creates purpose. Leading with CONNECTION creates momentum. Leading with DIRECTION creates collective efficacy. Leading with all three in mind will build your capacity and foster an environment where everyone in your organization has the best opportunity to lead from where they are.

Teaching with Impact: Strategies for Student Growth and a Culture of Excellence

Shelly Daun and Kelly Barkovich

It's no secret that ALL students should be afforded high-quality instruction that promotes growth and achievement. In this session, we will explore high-impact instructional strategies that elevate every student. Rooted in a belief that all students deserve access to exceptional, growth-oriented instruction, we'll dive into evidence-based practices that enable each learner to thrive. Attendees will walk away equipped with practical techniques to foster a culture of belonging, inspire ownership, and address diverse needs, ensuring that every student feels valued, challenged, and capable of success.

Observable Impact for Educators

Shannon Myers

In this interactive session, educators will go beyond posters, slogans, and buzzwords to identify what we would observe students and educators doing in a thriving culture. Together, we will work through the process of defining clear, observable behaviors that reflect strong relationships, engagement, and high expectations. Designed for teachers, instructional specialists, and leaders, this session offers practical tools, collaborative learning, and a clear framework for turning vision into action. Attendees will leave with a process they can take back to their schools to define, observe, and strengthen a culture that inspires and engages every student and educator.

Building Collective Efficacy - When Teams Believe, Students Achieve

Jenni Donohoo

What separates high-performing collaborative teams from those that struggle? It's collective efficacy—the shared belief among educators that together, they can make a profound difference for every student. In this interactive session, you'll discover how to intentionally build this powerful force within your teams through the four sources of efficacy: mastery experiences, vicarious experiences, persuasion, and affective states. Learn how to recognize and celebrate small wins, create opportunities for teachers to learn from one another, and foster the psychological safety necessary for honest reflection and growth. Walk away with concrete strategies to cultivate teams who don't just work together—they truly believe in their collective capacity to reach every learner.

Recalibrating PLCs: Building Collaborative Teams that Drive Impact

Gabe Hackett

In many schools and districts, PLCs have become stale and repetitive. Discover how to elevate your Professional Learning Communities to meet the demands of our current and future education landscape. Our PLCs have the potential to help collaborative teams drive observable improvements in student learning outcomes. In this session, we'll explore collaborative tools that lead to impact in the classroom and create a vision for effective collaborative teams. Participants will walk away with proven strategies that foster a culture of collective efficacy, align team actions with learning goals, and prioritize impact in the classroom.

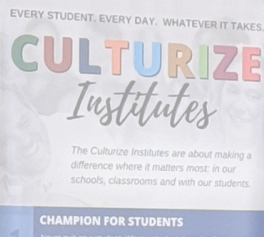

Crafting the Culture

Joe Sanfelippo

Nailing down a precise definition of culture can be tricky; at times, it seems as if culture is more a "feeling" than anything that can be quantified, measured, or seen. Yet, the feeling about culture one gets when entering any school or classroom is palpable. It is relatively easy to distinguish between schools and classrooms with strong cultures from those with less productive cultures. Any leader interested in maximizing their influence on others and the performance of those they lead, whether first-grade students, a group of teachers, or a team of business professionals, must be intentional about focusing on the culture they are trying to build and maintain.

From Co-Existing to Co-Teaching: Making the Models Work

Shelly Daun and Kelly Barkovich

Great co-teaching doesn't happen by accident; it takes intentional planning, shared responsibility, and a belief that every student deserves excellent instruction. In this session, you'll explore the five foundational co-teaching models and learn how to use each one with purpose and impact. Whether you're just getting started or looking to take your partnership to the next level, you'll walk away with practical tools to collaborate more effectively, engage all learners, and lead by example in your school. It's time to move beyond just sharing space and start creating something powerful together.

Engaging Students and Families to Maximize Student Achievement

Rachel Edoho-Eket

Strong family-school partnerships are the foundation of student success. This interactive session explores practical, research-based strategies that help educators and administrators build meaningful connections with students and their families relying on connections that directly impact motivation, engagement, and academic growth. Drawing from real-world experience across urban, suburban, and affluent school communities, participants will discover how to:

- Foster trust and authentic communication with families from all backgrounds.
- Create welcoming environments that empower families as active partners in the learning process.
- Design targeted learning experiences that connect home and school expectations.
- Implement engagement strategies that improve attendance, behavior, and achievement.

Through stories, examples, and ready-to-use tools, attendees will leave with actionable steps to strengthen relationships, elevate family participation, and create a school culture where every student, and every family, feels seen, valued, and supported.

Building a Culture of Collaboration through Challenge

Gabe Hackett

Collaboration isn't tested when things are easy—effective PLCs are developed in the moments when teams navigate differing beliefs, personalities, and perspectives. This session will focus on practical ways to build and sustain a culture of collaboration even when facing common challenges such as team dynamics, resistance, or conflicting priorities. Participants will engage in structures and strategies to address these obstacles with clarity and courage, turning tension points into opportunities for growth and stronger collective impact.

It's Not About the Technology: AI as a Mirror That Reflects School Culture

Tony Frontier

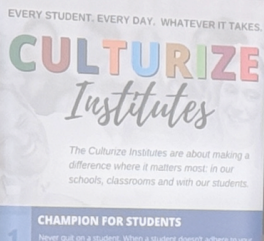

Recent research shows teachers and administrators have serious concerns about the impact of widespread access to AI tools on student learning and academic integrity. While AI detectors and revised academic integrity policies can treat the symptoms of these challenges, they fail to address - and embrace - underlying opportunities to strengthen and improve school culture. In this session, you'll learn empathetic design techniques and instructional strategies that help you be a champion for all students and support their academic excellence in an era where AI tools are everywhere.

Culturize Your Instructional Coaching

Danica Lewis

The Culturize framework encourages teachers and leaders to be their very best for every student. As instructional coaches, this is our #1 goal! In our roles as supporters and leaders, we can show the way for those we serve. Real, sustainable academic and cultural improvement requires support for teachers that goes beyond what the typical teacher in-service day can offer. When teachers have access to intentional, job-embedded coaching, they are more likely to take risks, try new approaches, and stick with those strategies that work for the long haul. In this session, we will work through several strategies for questioning, feedback, and conversation that can be leveraged by coaches and leaders to empower teachers as they develop classroom instruction that drives student learning and growth. Participants will walk away with ready to use tools that will make a difference in the success of teachers and students.

Breakout SPEAKERS

Becky
Pepler

Becky Pepler is the Director of the FIRST Education STAGR Center, a division of FIRST Educational Resources. With over 18 years in public education, she is dedicated to helping schools navigate the challenges of grading and assessment reform to create systems that support student learning and growth. A former 6-12 Instructional Coach and science educator, Becky has played a pivotal role in guiding numerous schools through full transitions to Standards-Based Grading. She has worked with over 100 districts nationwide, helping educators design grading practices that are meaningful, accurate, and student-centered. Her expertise includes developing clear learning targets, designing meaningful assessments, implementing effective reassessment policies, and ensuring grades reflect student achievement rather than behavior. She is passionate about supporting schools in building grading systems that foster deeper learning, meaningful communication, and improved transparency between teachers, students, and families. Becky is the co-author of the best-selling book, Extinguishing the Fires of Assessment and Grading Reform and the STAGR Process Roadmap Laminated Guide, collaborating with Dr. Garth Larson and Ken O'Connor. Her work continues to drive impactful change in grading practices, helping educators create systems that truly support student success.

Breakout SPEAKERS

Stephen
Speck

Stephen Speck began his career in education as an elementary classroom teacher, where he spent nearly a decade inspiring students while also serving as head coach for two high school athletic programs. His passion for leadership and teamwork led him to oversee the athletic departments of three school districts across two states for a combined 15 years, concluding his educational career as the Director of Athletics for the South Western School District in Hanover, Pennsylvania.

Stephen believes that every staff member has the capacity to lead and is dedicated to helping educators and administrators cultivate high-performing teams built on trust, collaboration, and shared purpose. He currently serves as a leadership coach for J Casas and Associates, where he focuses on leadership development, personal growth, and strategies that strengthen staff morale and empower individuals to bring their best selves to work each day.

Jim Wichman

Jim Wichman is a twenty-five year veteran of education administration who possesses a plethora of urban/rural public school experiences. Growing up in poverty and even temporarily homeless, Jim knows the importance of constantly supporting students and the adults who serve those students. Jim's years of experience at wide-ranging levels and within varied settings culminate for a specialist perspective. Jim takes pride in his innovative, dedicated approach to procure collective efficacy within each building he has served. His consistent focus on "Respecting, Supporting, and Valuing" has allowed for ongoing enhancement of staff, students, and systems. Jim is the former Prairie Ridge Middle School Principal in Ankeny, Iowa, serving over 1100 middle schoolers where he "shook the world as he went by." Additionally, Jim has been a featured speaker and leadership coach throughout the country from Arizona to New York, focusing on organizational culture and employer/employee relationships. Jim also served as Iowa's NASSP State Coordinator for 4 years where he worked with elected officials on understanding the current state of education. Jim is married to his wife Amy, also a lifelong educator, and they have three children, EmmaKate, Evallyn, and Everhett.
